CONGRESS OF THE

UNITED STATES.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, APRIL 7. SPANISH AFFAIRS.

DEBATE On the motion of Mr. J. Randolph to amend the secret journal, by inserting in it the message of the President of the 5th Decem-

Mr. DANA said he was happy they were enabled to take a direct vote on the publication of the message. On the vote just ta. ken he had felt himself bound to consult the opinions of gentlemen who had thought when the injunction of secrecy was taken off, it did not apply to the publication of the message. The question now presents itself directly for consideration, whether it would be most expedient to publish it. It appears to me, said Mr. Dana, that there will be no breach of confidence in publishing it. If in private life one man makes'a communication to another, and the person who receives it says he will not pledge himself to kee; it secret, there is no obligation on him not to divulge it, and should he divulge it there will be no question about the violation of confidence. Underwhat form then, was the communication of the president made to this house? Is there any thing in the constitution relative to the president's communicating any thing to either house in confidence, and absolutely prohibiting either house from disclosing it? If there is no such thing in the constitution the disclosure must be left to our discretion, of the propriety of which we must be the judges. In the first place, the constitation of the United States provides for such communications to congress as the president may see fit to make ; it also declares that each house shall be governed by such rules as they shall make. Now when | most contiguous states to New Orleans this message was received, the rules of the last house were adopted, and are such as are now in force. What in the rule applicable to the present point?

"Whenever confidential communications are received from the president of the United States, the house shall be cleared of all persons except the members and the clerk, and so continue during the reading of such communications, and (unless otherwise directed by the house) during all debates and proceedings to be had thereon. And when the speaker, or any other member, shall inform the house, that he has communications to make, which he con. ceives ought to be kept secret, the house shall, in like manner, be cleared till the communication be made; the house shall then determine whether the matter commu nicated requires secreey or not, and take order accordingly."

The president can make no communica, tions to us except under this rule. It was under this rule that this measage was communicated. What is the inference? The rule was peremptory, se far as it required the communication of the president to be read with closed doors; but after having been so received, it is strictly within the power of the house to decide whether it shall continue private, or be published. The president must have communicated the message under this impression. No obligation of confidence can be infringed by publishing it. Believing, therefore, that the publication will be no violation of Great Britain, and determined to coerce confidence, and believing that it will be for her by prehibiting the importation of her the public good, I shall vote for it.

Mr. SLOAN. I shall, as decidedly as the gentleman from Connecticut vote against the publication of the message; and on a principle which it behoves me never to take money; while with Great Britain. to abandon se long as I hold a seat on this floor. If I understand any thing of the matter, it was communicated to the house by the president in confidence that it would not be published; and if I have any idea of prepriety, it ought to be still kept secret, as the reasons which first made it so still continue. If we are not constitutionally bound to keep the communications made by the president secret, I do conceive we are under an obligation of respect to the other branches of the government, not to betray the confidence reposed in us; and should this communication be published the other branches of the government ought first to sanction it. Such a course would, in my opinion, have a direct tendency, to ly reversed. There was no doubt of the destroy our confidence in the president, and our diplomatic characters abroad.

question is taken I have a few observations to offer in addition to these which I submitted the other day on the subject of the secret proceedings, to shew that the message of the president ought to be published, not only in justification of the report of the select committee which has been published, but in justice to the government it. self. An attempt has been made in the public prints, and on this floor, to give a color to the proceedings of the house, when in conclave, totally inconsistent with, and in opposition to truth. It has been intimated that the minority was in favor of war; or by intimating that the majority were in favor of pacific measures, the inference has been drawn that the minority were in favor of war. The fact is this and as the wessage of the president has been read as a part of the journal ordered to be publish. ed, as the speaker and clerk have attested, I will undertake to state what it contains unless prevented by the chair.

The Speaker interrupted Mr. R. by ob. serving that such a statement would not be

Mr. Randolph. I will confine myself then to stating that the division of sentiment in the house, was whether we should have a territorial accommodation of our differences with Spain, whether we should have an accommodation which did not merely suit Spain and us, or a monied ac. commodation which neither suited us or Spain, but France. A recurrence to the journals will show this to have been the principal difference that subvisted within the walls of this house. There was no party of men in this house, or elsewhere, in favor of war: for I beg leave to call gentlemen on the committee to witness that the opinion of the majority of the select committee was that we should neither give money or make war; but that we should defend the limits of the old United States and the territories acquired from Spain. What were the facts? Our army was dis persed in cantonments, God knows where. The country to be protected was far removed from any considerable surrounding population; a country which, from the circumstances in which it is placed, must be kept and held by military force. When the militia of the United States from the were deputed to take possession of the country, excess proved that it could not be defended by militia, unless indeed by the militia of the Chickasaws, the Creeks and the Choctaws. It is not only cut off from the populous parts of the U. States, but it is protruded into the Gulph of Mexico, and also surrounded by extensive marshes which do not admit of its being defended in the same manner as the other parts of the U. States. So much with regard to a standing army. The committee applied to the head of the proper department to know what force would be required to defend the frontiers. Our report has been published Why have not the letter addressed to the secretary of war and his report been likewise published? If the executive of the United States will take upon itself the responsibility of defending the country with a single grenadier, be it so. But it was said there was not sufficient force to defend the country; and are we not now attempt. ing by a landed bounty to generate this force? These circumstances prove our views in committee, and I do not hesitate to say that all the force we have should have been placed in the vicinity of New Orleans-that was the weak point which ought to have been guarded.

There is another view of the subject. -Against Spain, with whom we had tried the fair experiment of negociation; & which had totally failed, we took no manly atti tude; while we reserved all our energy for millinery. Yes, against Spain, when our negociations had totally failed, and under circumstances of disgrace to the U. States, we took no manly ground, but begged her with whom negociation had not failed while a negociation was depending, we declared ourselves in favor of taking a decisive and hostile attitude. Here is the real difference of opinion. In the one case we had a pending negociation; in the other it had been tried and failed. But that is not all. Because we bought Louisiana from France, it was concended that we should be following the old precedent by buying the Ploridas of Spain. But in answer it was observed that in the first case we made an offer to purchase as a prelude to negociation; and it was declared that the misconduct of the Spanish agents was unauthorised. But here the case was completemisconduct of the Spanish agents being authorised, and negociation had been tried ence. In one case we made a fair and offered to pay for it with territory west of honorable purchase from France who own- the Mississippi. But Spain replies, that ed the property; but in this case, we ob- territory belongs to me, and as I am able served that we were about to make a dis- and willing to defend both, I will not give honorable purchase of a highwayman of up one to pay for the other. And so far property taken from its rightful owner, or from making the Colerado river a boundary to obtain his services to bully it from its being a great concession, the present actu. rightful owner; and it was known the de- al boundary is, I know not how many hunclaration had been repeatedly made, that a dred miles, this side of its high officer of the government of the U. States, the head of the department of to fail? The great wonder with me is that the state, avowed that the money was for ministers of the United States made out to con-France. Where has the Hornet sailed? time their exertions fo long as they did in prest. To Corunna or to Cadiz? No, to Nantz, the highroad to Paris. It was not because there was a party in the house indisposed put on a hostile attitude towards Spain, and to the honest acquisition of the Floridas, but because there was a party indisposed to acquire them at the expence of the na accommodation that take place. When the tional treasure and honor, that opposition fact came out, a general attonishment prevailed. originated to the measures you have taken. and my worthy friend from Mary and, who no No, sir, we were not for war, we were longer holds a feat in this house, told you that for peace-for acting on true policy on the he hoped in God the negociation would fail. I principle of taking firmer ground than have faid fo much, that at least that portion of has been taken-that ground which we the public in our hearing may be undeceived, in thought was called for; and not for endea- respect to the proceedings of the house, when in voring to curry favor with one of the Eu- conclave, and may give due information to their ropezu powers by throwing our weight in her scale, and thus producing a cause of quarrel with another nation during a pend. ing negociation. This is the fact. We told gentlemen that after France had said, if you give Spain one blow I will give you ren or two, I dot recollect which; after she had teld you that your claims against Spain must be abandoned; after she had in the most insulting and degrading manner interfered in your differences with Spain: that, under these circumstances to put money into the hands of France was not only a vielation of your neutrality with Great Britain; but that the ground subsequently taken towards Great Britain was a most dastardly accommodation to the wishes of France, in order, by putting on a hostile attitude to Britain to curry favor with the emperor of France; and which was not demanded by the situation of our affairs with Great Britain.

What is our true policy? To take part with neither of those nations; to let neither of them hoger one dollar of our money; to resist the unjust pretentions of all. This policy we have abandoned, and what is the consequence? The national honor has re. ceived a stain which all the waters of the Potomac cannot wash out. It is on the page of history, and cannot now be taken off. The nation is stigmatised: it has re. ceived a blot, which all your Indian rubber cannot efface. But it has been represented that I took part with the Spanish against the American government in telation to the disputed ter ritory between the Perdido and the Mississippi. I took part so far as this: I did not wish to see the American honor sacrificed in a contest with Spain. I took part so far as to be called a Spanish partizan by some gentlemen, while others charged me with being willing to kindle a war with Spain-Istated that we had never received copies of the instructions of the minister delegated to negociate with the Spanish govern ment; and that if we should call for the documents we should find that the busi ness from the first to the last had been ma. naged in the most embecile manner-I do not speak of the negociator, God forbid but of these who drew the instructions of the man who negociated. We bought Lou. isiana from France under the terms of the treaty of St. Ildefenso. According to the executive underst a ling that country ex. tended to the Perdido and the Reo Bravo. We immediately legislated on our first claim and passed a law erecting the bay & shares of the Mobille into a revenue distriet. What was the fact? That we were legislating without information. We had never been told that Laussat had been directed to receive the country only to the al intelligence of moment, nor does it throw Iberville and the Lakes. We consequently legislated in error for want of correct executive information. This was the heginning. We then sen commissioners to Madrid. These commissioners had various causes of complaint against Spain. One was for the injury we had sustained from the suspension of the right of depo- ris at 10 o'clock on Tuesday night, with sit at New Orleans, which has not to this orders to send them off immediately, day been satisfied; another was for spolia- and deliver them to the first British tions committed on our commerce in the cruiser that had a king's officer on board; West Indies; another for spoliations com. boundaries. We wanted the government.

Mr. J. RANDOLPH. Before the fand had failed. There was another differ. Sterritory on the east of the Mississippi, and Could fuch a negociation, thus conducted, fail ing fuch a proposition, At last some of the X. Y, and Z men go to our ministers, and lay, Spain to our mediation, give as a round fum, and we will dictate the terms on which an constituents when they go home-for fituated at we are in this remote corner of the union, in wildernefs and defert, with but a fingle ; refs, it is impossible that any thing like a correct trans. fcript of our proceedings can go to the public. I make this flatement that it may be known that we felt no indisposition to respect the national horor either as to Britain or Spain; but that we were for no half way measures with either nation. We were willing to try negociation with Britain, and when that had failed, we were willing to go to the requifi e length.

I hope for the honor of the Executive govern. ment of the United States, the message of the President will be published. With regard to any effect it may have on the negociations at Pais, it is the idlest thing in the world to talk of any effect being produced there by any thing but mo. ney. They will look at your cash; It it is enough you will have your bufinels done; If n t, it will not be done. Ob this point I will add a Single word. I am prepared to hear it faid, that if this negociation fails, it will be in consequence of the fecret journal being published. But it requires no wizard to foretell that it will fail, It muft. The battle of Aufterlitz has fettled that question. It cannot succeed. It is impossi. ble-And were it possible, the success of the ne. gociation would depend on nothing done in this House, save the sum of money given to France to compel Spain to do fo and so. What will be the cousequence of your measures? If there shall be a peace in Europe, you may expect a ftrong Spanish squadron, aided perhaps by a French force in the bay of Pensacola; and you may be glad to get off with the loss of two millions, you may be glad to get off with a low of twenty millions; France fold Louisiana to the United States for fo many millions, 3,750,000 dollars of which were to be paid to our citizens. We have been gulfed out of that. But the last thing that has entered into the mind of France is to fettle any thing definite with fixed meter and boundaries. Her object is to deal with you for money. She means to fell by the degree, and every time you apply to her for a tettlement of boundaries, the will call upon you for more money. We were inchposed to give it into these terms.

The arrival of the flag of truce, which was known at the Stock Exchange between wo and three o'clock, produced the effect of raising the funds, which in the preced. ing part of the day had been depressed by large sales of stock made, as we understand, by some Dutch houses. The rise, however, was not so great as it probably would have been, had not some communication been made with respect to the loan for the service of the year.

Some Paris papers arrived last night of the 12th instant. One of them, the Gazette de France, contains a note which seems to shew that the French expect Bonaparte's speech will pave the way for a negociation for peace. It is a note upon an article of London intelligence, which mentions that " Mr. Fox suffered himself to be very easily persuaded by lord Gren. ville, that peace could not be thought of on account of the unfavorable circumstances and unprepitious situation in which England found herself."

The Aurora is of opinion that the object of the Administration in publishing the letters of the Secretary of the Navy to Mr. Turner and to the Prefident, proclaiming the inability of govern. ment to adopt any measure of defence, was " to censure congress." FOREIGN NEWS.

The arrival of the ship Packet, Trott, at Pierce, a citizen of the United States, then pur-Boston, extends our London dates to the 22d March.

The editor of the Boston Gazette observes, that nothing of a public nature had transpired relative to the flag of truce from France.

The expose of the senate of the French empire, had been received in England. It is an elaborate work, and embraces a wide and extensive field of political speculation. The terms upon which England may obtain peace, are, when fully considered, nothing less than an equality of maritime strength. France, at the same time, to retain every acquisition she has made on the continent of Europe. While this language is held out to England, the expose enumerates Holland as one of the tederative parts of the "Grand Empire," not merely as an allied power with France, but as incorporated with that kingdom. The intention too, of revolutionizing the Turkish provinces is openly avowed. After these pacific declarations, the expose goes on to state the improvements making in the French ports,

"If you cast your eyes on our ports, you will see that exertions are making on both seas, torender them more accessible, more commodious, and more secure. Basins are digging at Antwerp; sluices and canals are forming at Antwerp. Dieppe, Ostend, Dunkirk and Havre. At Honfleur, Bordeaux, Nice, Hulinguen, Belleisle, Ajaccio and Bastia, quays are constructed, and jetties or moles lengthened or rebuilt, All these different kinds of works are carrying on at Rochelle. The cleansing of the ports of Cette and Marseilles is continued, and that of Oleron is enlarging. The ports of Dielette and Casteret are prepared in such a manner as to be capable of receiving a great number of vessels and gun boats, which will alarm the inhabitants of the English islands of Jersey and Guernsey, as those at Bologne menace Dover and London. The soundings taken at Brue have afforded satisfactory results; the Rhone will have a port. Engineers have examin. ed what improvements it is possible to make in that of Genoa. Six millions eight hundred and fifty thousand francs have been expended on the military ports. This sum has been principally applied in the excavations, the jetties of the mole, the construction of the outer port and basin, and the foundation of the new port Bonaparte, which, destined to complete this beautiful maritime creation, and worthy of his name, will be, on the channel, the terror of England; at Bologne, the basin and the sluice, the completion of the works which constitute the whole of the port, and the con. is surrounded; at Ambletense, the works necessary for deepening the port, the elevation of the jetty, which protects it from the sand driven against it by the west winds, line walls, and the buildings; at Brest, the formation of an artificial island, the excavations in the rock, the hospitals, the magazines, the arsenal, the barracks, and the completion of the batteries; at Ant. werp, the continuation of the rapid works which are to form the arsenal of our marine on the North Sea, the erection of quays and work shops; in the road of Rochefort, the jetties on which Fort Bayard is to be erected, and the operations of every kind required by this difficult construction." We feel the utmost pleasure (says a respectable London paper) in being enabled, by the best authority, to assure our readers, that the illustrious statesmen, whom we have now at the helm, have taken the most effectual steps to adjust all differences with America; and that the earl of Selkirk is going out ambassador to the U. They were furveyed at the fame time with those lands in the year 1772, and are held under the same titles, viz. Old Military Rights-which are or questionable.

The Lands are of the very first quality, the Bottoms in many places a mile wide; they have been lately refureeyed and divided into lots con. taining from 150 to 350 acres each, for the accommodation or purchasers, each lot fronting on the river, and extending back from thence to the hills, which afford a most extensive range for stock, which can never be interrupted. One hundred acres therefore of this rich bottom, with its advantages, would make a good fettlement. The great [Virginia] state road leading to the flates of Ohio and Kentucky, paffea by and through these lands, which being on a fine navi. gable river will command a ready and high price for the produce to the emigrants to the welfern country both by land and water. Their fituati. on, befides, gives their occupants choice of the eaften or western markets, as produce may be found most profitable. The climate is mild and remarkably favorable to the production of fruit-Salt works are erected on the banks of the river but a few miles above thefe lattils, and the neigh. borhood furnishes abundance of iron, coxl, lime. stone, milis and mill feats; fo that there is no part of the western country which holds out more advantages to perfons definous of smigrating,
